

The Construction Specification Institute

CSI was established as a national society in Baltimore, Maryland in 1948, representing not only the interests of specifier's, but of the entire construction industry. The Institute maintains offices in Alexandria, Virginia and includes more than 15,000 members across the USA and internationally, engaged in all areas and all types of construction. The Institute supports efforts in college level and continuing education, development and expansion of technical information and establishment of formats for drawings as well as specifications. There is current emphasis on a global construction network.
